

"Must Do's" in SALZBURG

Eat a Mozartkugel

Salzburg chocolatier Paul Fürst invented the Mozartkugel ("Mozart ball") in 1890 and named it after his city's most famous son. The pistachio, marzipan and nougat core is coated in milk chocolate and until today handmade in the Konditorei Fürst at Alter Markt square. Much cheaper and almost as tasty are numerous other brands of Mozartkugel, sold everywhere in Salzburg - if not Austria.

Vist the Müllner Bräu

Monks brew beer in Austria for centuries and the editor's choice for the best place to consume a traditional 1-litre-Stein of "Märzen" (lager), is under chestnut trees in the beer garden of the Bräustüberl in the city district of Mülln. Equally popular by students, locals and tourists, it is a lively place and wonderful to hang out on a warm summer evening. There is also food, lemonade, coffee etc., so a lot for everybody.

Go to a classic concert or the theatre

There is music beyond the pricy Salzburg Festival in this city - just look for ticket offices or stop by the music university Mozarteum, where you can often get cheap tickets for "house productions". Very scenic, though a little touristy are classic concerts organised in the fortress or Mirabell castle.

If you are a student under 26, you are entitled to get cheap tickets at the Landestheater box office for all productions 30 minutes before the beginning of the play. For further enquires, see our Salzburg link directory, or ask at the tourist information. If you speak German, look out for the local newspaper "Salzburger Nachrichten" - they have a daily calendar with a concert and theatre guide.

Meet locals & get a sense for the "Salzburg beyond Mozart"

In the peak of the season, Salzburg is well-hidden under several layers of tourists - which is fair enough, eventually all of you come to enjoy a spectacular city. However, it can make things difficult if you want to get involved with local people. Good spots for doing so are "Café Shakespeare" at Mirabell square, the University canteens ("Mensa") or other University facilities.

Go rambling on one of the hills

There are several hills in Salzburg itself, you will get the best views from Mönchsberg and Festungsberg (though these are the most crowded ones) and Kapuzinerberg - the latter one is very suitable for a round starting at the Capuchin Monastery and leading you all across the hill to the southern end of it. For more demanding hikes, attack Gaisberg or Untersberg, both accessible with public busses. Salzburg is a hiking paradise!

Listen to the Glockenspiel on Residenz Square

One of only three proper Glockenspiels (an instrument composed of several bells) is part of the New Residenz in Salzburg. It was installed in 1704 under Prince Archbishop Johan Ernst Graf Thun and contains of 35 bells, playing 40 different tunes. Stand on Residenz square to hear it play - daily at 11 am and 6 pm.
